ON THE CORE CURRICULUM

The unifying character of the Ph.D. program in the Institute of Philosophic Studies finds its chief expression in its Core Curriculum. It summons the IPS faculty and students to the task of recovery and renewal of the tradition of Western liberal education and the Christian intellectual life. “Recovery” means that there is wisdom in the past. It insists that those who went before have much yet to teach those who come after. It holds that in our search for wisdom about the most important things, the ingenious, formative minds of the past should be chief companions in the inquiry. Moreover, it implies that any grasp of present realities and any serious projects for the future are intimately bound up with the principles of the great tradition. “Renewal” reminds us that history always puts a new face on the difficulties that beset those who endeavor to seek truth and justice in their own time. The IPS faculty accepts the challenge to think critically and creatively about the most significant issues. Indeed, it is the compelling force of our questions today that gives direction and purpose to our study of the tradition. Ancient verities can be neglected, and neither the ancients nor the moderns saw the whole of truth clearly. It is with this sense of purpose our doctoral students are asked to examine at their deepest level the principles of Western liberal learning.

Philosophy, Politics, Literature, and Theology are the four disciplines of the Institute. Although they are four distinct ways of knowing, each engages fundamental questions that concern the whole context of existence. Philosophy and Politics represent the fundamental speculative and practical modes of inquiry respectively, while Literature presents the lived through possibilities embodying philosophy in a whole life. The three disciplines together are cut across and penetrated by the dialogue between faith and reason rooted in revelation and sustained by Theology. Through the Core Curriculum and its interdisciplinary character the student experiences the common quest for wisdom through the differing and complementary disciplines.

The primary vehicle of instruction is the close study of great texts, distinguished by their power to illumine

ON THE CONCENTRATIONS

At present, the areas of concentration offered in the Institute are Literature, Philosophy, and Politics. Over their course of studies, students are required to earn the 21 credit hours of core courses, and 45 credit hours of course work in their area of concentration, 9 of which may be electives in a related discipline with the approval of their concentration director. The Ph.D. dissertation and major portions of the Qualifying and Comprehensive Examination are also ordered toward the mastery of the student's discipline. Although acquisition of one's discipline demands a degree of special knowledge and a high level of professional competence in the mastery of issues, canons, and modes of analysis, education in the concentration also aims to sustain a broad, philosophical concern with first principles.

Literature

The philosophic character of literary study within the Institute is reflected in a concentration upon major authors whose works can claim philosophic scope and penetration. The approach to these works is also

ON DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

The Institute of Philosophic Studies awards the Ph.D. and M.A., under the titles Doctor of Philosophy in Literature, Philosophy, or Politics, and Master of Arts in English, Philosophy, or Politics.

Languages

Students must fulfill the language requirement in one of three ways:

1) By taking an upper level (3000+) course (other than the special reading courses) at the University of Dallas in the literature of the language in question and by passing with a grade of B or better (students entering the Institute with a bachelor's degree from the University of Dallas may fulfill the requirement with such a course taken at the University no more than three years prior to admission into the IPS). Request for this option should be made prior to the registration for a course. Upon completion the student should submit an unofficial transcript to the Braniff Office.

2) By taking and passing a written examination in a language. (This examination may be the final examination in the special language courses offered for graduate students.)

3) In the classical languages only, by passing a written examination on material from a classic text pertinent to the student's concentration and agreed upon

Concentration Director in the semester before the examination. It must be officially approved within one week after the completion of the degree audit at the beginning of the semester when the comprehensive examination is taken. The student is expected to know the text or texts thoroughly, including the major secondary literature.

2. A one-and-a-half hour oral examination is usually given within three weeks of the written examination. It includes questioning of the student's answers in the written examination, but may also include other questions about any of the texts on the concentration reading list or about the content of any course that the student has taken.

3. The questions for the written examination4.6(ng)10.9(of)--3.917.1(i)-4(a)-1.6(k6.2(he)-a3(t)-/P <</-y 3 -2s0.9(n 2

OTHER POLICIES

Institute M.A.

Students in the Institute may apply for a Master of Arts in their concentration upon successful completion of forty-two credit hours (12 of which must be in the Core), fulfillment of one language requirement, and the successful completion of the Qualifying Examination. Proper distribution of credit hours involves at least thirty hours in the concentration, to which appropriate Core courses and other courses approved by the Concentration Director as part of the degree plan may apply.

Transfers of Graduate Credits

After students have successfully completed 9 credit hours in IPS courses, they may petition for a transfer of concentration credits from previous graduate studies. Note: transfer work may not be used to earn the Institute MA. If the previous work in question was done at an institution other than UD, then no more than nine credits may be transferred into the IPS. However, transfer of course credits is not automatic. The Concentration Director recommends the transfer and the Graduate Dean's signature makes the transfer final. Course work eligible for consideration for transfer credit must meet the following conditions: It must have been taken within the previous six years; it must be strictly comparable to UD courses, the work must have been done at an accredited university or college; and it must have received the equivalent of a grade of B or better. Pass/fail courses may not be transferred. If the previous work was Master's level work done at UD in the programs of English, Philosophy or Politics, then the number of allowable credits will be determined by the discretion of the Graduate Dean upon the recommendation of the Concentration Director. In making petitions for credit for courses taken elsewhere, students must submit to the Concentration

Incomplete Grade Policy

The "I" (incomplete) grade should be used sparingly. (Above all, incomplete grades should be studiously avoided for IPS core courses, because of the difficulties surrounding completing team-taught courses, repeated only once every three years!) Incomplete grades now require a contract between the student and the faculty member teaching the course, using the Form 120, available through the Registrar's Office webpage. That contract establishes due dates and specifies the work required to complete the course.

When work is submitted by the due date specified on the contract, the "I" is only slashed over. If work is not completed on time, the "I" grade will either become permanent (I*) or will be changed to some other grade, at the teacher's discretion, to reflect work completed.

Braniff graduate school scholarships will not cover the re-taking of courses in which a permanent incomplete (I*) was earned.

On occasion the deadline for finishing incompletes is extended because of special circumstances, but in no case may students take either the qualifying or the comprehensive examination with outstanding incompletes on their record.

Grade Point Average (GPA) Requirements

The minimum GPA required for annual continuance in the program and for graduation is 3.00. In courses in which a grade lower than C (2.00 GPA) is given, the grade counts for determining the grade point average but does not satisfy course requirements. Grades for language courses do not count in the final GPA, nor will they be counted in determining both scholarship renewal and eligibility to continue in the programs.

A GPA of 3.5 is required for continued scholarship support.

Review of Students

At the end of each spring semester all IPS students are reviewed to determine their continuance in the program and the level of University of Dallas scholarship aid they will receive.

Deadlines

Please check the UD web page, "Braniff Student Resources" (https://udallas.edu/braniff/student-resources/index.php) for a listing of the deadlines for completion of degree requirements. The student is responsible for knowing and meeting these deadlines.
